VCPI Announces Change in Leadership Owner Craig Christianson assumes role of CEO

Milwaukee, WI, October 31, 2017 – VCPI, a nationwide provider of information technology (IT) solutions to long-term and post-acute care (LTPAC) providers, announced today that Craig Christianson will assume the role of CEO.

Craig has extensive knowledge and experience in the LTPAC industry and, as Chairman and Owner, is eager to become more directly involved in the organization. After personally interacting with clients and prospects, Craig has renewed his passion for the industry and the people it serves.

"I have a lot of empathy for what providers are up against. I look forward to doing what I can to address their pain points with my VCPI colleagues," Craig said.

Craig's history with VCPI dates back to its beginning in 2000, when he was a key contributor for four years, pivotal to its startup business plan and launch. From 2004-2016, Craig remained involved in an ongoing consultative and advisory role for the company with regard to its operations. He and his wife Karen bought VCPI in December 2016, and appointed the leadership team in April of this year.

"My goal is for VCPI to become broadly employee-owned over time, and provide a long-term perspective to benefit all our constituencies: employees, clients, the community, suppliers, and shareholders," Craig said. "We are allocating resources not only to improve quality of service and develop new offerings, but to also reinvest back into the company."
